Trained before they leave. Matched before they arrive.

We work with a small number of dogs at a time. We do not sell from a catalog. We match a specific dog to a specific household.

STEP PRIVATE PLACEMENT

1

PERSON, CALL TO HANDOVER

Trained before they leave

You are not paying for a puppy and hoping for the best. Every dog is fully trained before you take it home.

Quality over volume

A small number of dogs at a time keeps the standard high and every dog accounted for.

Service after the sale

Deal with the same person from first call to handover, and reach us whenever you have questions.

Four working breeds, matched to you.

German Shepherd, Belgian Malinois, Dutch Shepherd and Rottweiler.

Availability changes, so call to ask which dogs are ready now.

German Shepherd

The classic working dog. Loyal, steady, and easy to live with when trained well.

BEST FOR

Families and first-time owners

Belgian Malinois

Fast, driven, and very sharp. Thrives with an owner who gives it work and structure.

BEST FOR

Active, experienced handlers

Dutch Shepherd

Athletic and intelligent with a calm side. A strong all-round protection partner.

BEST FOR

Active homes wanting a balanced dog

Rottweiler

Powerful and confident with a natural presence. Devoted to its household.

BEST FOR

Owners wanting a strong, steady guardian

German Shepherd

The classic all-round protection dog: loyal, steady and easy to work with.

OVERVIEW

German Shepherds are versatile working dogs valued for their trainability, athleticism, and ability to work closely with a handler. Whether an individual dog is right for protection work depends on its temperament, health, training, and suitability for the intended home.

AT A GLANCE

Height	22-26 in
Weight	50-90 lb
Lifespan	9-13 years
Origin	Germany
Daily exercise	1.5-2 hours

WHAT TO CONSIDER

Temperament and Household Fit

Consider the individual dog's behavior around family members, visitors, unfamiliar people, and other animals. Breed alone does not determine suitability.

Training and Obedience

Ask which obedience skills the dog has demonstrated, how it responds to commands around distractions, and what handler instruction is provided.

Exercise and Daily Care

German Shepherds need regular physical activity, mental engagement, grooming, veterinary care, and ongoing training.

Choosing an Adult or Puppy

An adult trained dog offers an opportunity to assess established skills. A puppy requires a longer commitment to development and training, with no guarantee of future protection suitability.

QUESTIONS TO ASK BEFORE BUYING

- What training has this specific dog completed?
- What health and background records are available?
- How does the dog behave around children, visitors, and other pets?
- What handler training and transition support are provided?
- What are the purchase, delivery, and ongoing care costs?

EXPLORE GERMAN SHEPHERD OPTIONS

Ask about current availability and whether an individual German Shepherd may suit your household, experience, and goals. Best for: Families and first-time protection dog owners who want a dependable, versatile guardian.

Belgian Malinois

Fast, driven and very sharp: the choice of elite police and military units.

OVERVIEW

The Belgian Malinois is an athletic, intelligent working breed known for its energy, responsiveness, and drive. These qualities can be valuable in working roles, but they also create responsibilities for the owner.

AT A GLANCE

Height	22-26 in
Weight	40-80 lb
Lifespan	14-16 years
Origin	Belgium
Daily exercise	2+ hours

IS A BELGIAN MALINOIS RIGHT FOR YOU?

Energy and Daily Routine

Consider whether you can consistently provide physical exercise, mental work, structured training, and downtime.

Handling Experience

A high-drive dog may be challenging for an inexperienced handler. Discuss your experience and the support available before choosing an individual dog.

Training and Control

Ask for details about demonstrated obedience, the dog's response to commands, and how training transfers to a new handler.

Household Suitability

Review the individual dog's temperament, behavior around visitors and other animals, and compatibility with your living environment.

QUESTIONS TO ASK

- What training has this dog completed?
- How much daily activity does it need?
- What handler instruction is included?
- What health and background records are available?
- Is this dog suitable for my experience and household?

EXPLORE BELGIAN MALINOIS OPTIONS

We can discuss current availability and help you understand whether a particular dog fits your goals. Best for: Active, experienced handlers who want a high-performance working partner.

Dutch Shepherd

Athletic and intelligent with a calm side: a balanced protection partner.

OVERVIEW

Dutch Shepherds are athletic working dogs known for intelligence and energy. Individual dogs differ in temperament, drive, training, and their ability to adapt to a particular household.

AT A GLANCE

Height	21.5-24.5 in
Weight	42-75 lb
Lifespan	11-14 years
Origin	Netherlands
Daily exercise	1.5-2 hours

WHAT TO CONSIDER BEFORE CHOOSING

Training

Review demonstrated obedience, command response, and protection training.

Exercise

Plan for regular physical activity and mental engagement.

Experience

Discuss your handling background and the level of ongoing training required.

Household fit

Consider children, visitors, other pets, and your daily routine.

Individual assessment

Ask for specific information about the dog's behavior, health, and training history.

FIND THE RIGHT MATCH

The best dog is not necessarily the most athletic or impressive. It is the individual dog whose needs and temperament fit your circumstances. Best for: Active homes that want a balanced, athletic dog with strong protection ability.

Rottweiler

Powerful and confident with a natural presence, devoted to its household.

OVERVIEW

Rottweilers are powerful, confident dogs that require responsible ownership, consistent training, and appropriate socialization. An individual dog's temperament, health, and training history are essential when considering a protection role.

AT A GLANCE

Height	22-27 in
Weight	80-135 lb
Lifespan	9-10 years
Origin	Germany
Daily exercise	1-1.5 hours

CHOOSING A ROTTWEILER

Training and Handling

Ask what obedience and protection training the dog has completed and how its skills transfer to a new handler.

Temperament and Socialization

Discuss behavior around unfamiliar people, visitors, children, and other animals. Do not rely on breed reputation alone to assess safety or suitability.

Health and Care

Request relevant veterinary records and discuss exercise, weight management, grooming, and ongoing health needs.

Household Compatibility

Consider your experience, daily routine, property, and ability to maintain consistent training and supervision.

QUESTIONS BEFORE PLACEMENT

Ask about the dog's demonstrated skills, health records, background, placement arrangements, and transition support. Best for: Owners wanting a strong, steady guardian for the home and property.

Breed data at a glance

Typical breed-standard ranges for adult dogs. Individual dogs vary, which is why we match the dog, not just the breed.

Breed	Height	Weight	Lifespan
German Shepherd	22–26 in	50–90 lb	9–13 yrs
Belgian Malinois	22–26 in	40–80 lb	14–16 yrs
Dutch Shepherd	21.5–24.5 in	42–75 lb	11–14 yrs
Rottweiler	22–27 in	80–135 lb	9–10 yrs

Maximum adult weight

Typical lifespan (upper range)

300M

A dog's nose carries up to 300 million scent receptors, compared with about 6 million in a person. It is a major reason working dogs detect threats long before people do.

What "fully trained" means.

Four things every dog has before it goes home with you.

Controlled protection

Trained to respond on command and stand down on command.

Obedience

Heel, sit, down, stay, and recall that holds up around distractions.

Social stability

Settled around visitors, traffic, and public places.

Home manners

Calm and clean indoors, good with the people it lives with.

Trained dogs and puppies

Prefer to start early? We also have K9 puppies available. A trained dog protects from day one. A puppy lets you bond early but takes time and work.

Fully trained protection dogs.

Looking for a protection dog that has already completed professional training? We help you explore trained adult dogs and understand the skills, temperament and handling each individual dog needs.

UNDERSTAND EACH DOG BEFORE YOU DECIDE

For each available dog, ask about:

- Obedience and reliability around distractions
- Protection training and command response
- Behavior around visitors, children, other pets and unfamiliar environments
- Health documentation and training history
- Handler instruction and transition support

Is a trained adult right for you?

A trained adult suits buyers who want to evaluate an established training foundation before placement. You will still need to learn the dog's commands, maintain its training, and provide exercise and care. Training and temperament vary by individual dog.

Protection dog puppies: is a puppy right for you?

Raising a puppy lets you build a relationship from an early age, but it takes time, consistency, training and realistic expectations.

BEFORE CHOOSING A PUPPY

Consider your daily schedule, experience with dogs, household environment, exercise plans and access to qualified training.

A puppy is not a fully trained protection dog. Adult behavior, temperament and working suitability develop over time and cannot be guaranteed based on breed or early training alone.

Explore your options

Ask about current puppy availability, health documentation, background information, and the development and training plan that fits your goals. Not sure whether to choose a puppy or a trained adult? We can help you compare the two.

Private placement, from first contact to final delivery.

1 Private Consultation

A direct conversation. Your lifestyle, environment and security profile are mapped before any dog is discussed.

2 Client Assessment

We confirm fit, expectations and household readiness.

3 Match Selection

A specific dog is chosen from current candidates based on temperament, environment and family composition. If no dog meets the standard, we wait.

4 White-Glove Placement

Your dog is delivered personally, and we remain on-site through the household transition.

5 Lifetime Support

Ongoing performance maintenance, annual revisits, and direct access to us for the life of the dog.

Executives and families.

Executive Security K9

A calm, disciplined dog that works alongside a busy professional. Quiet in the office and car, ready when it matters, and discreet throughout.

Family Security K9

A steady protector that is settled around children and visitors. Trained to stand down on command and live comfortably indoors.

Built for real home life

Obedience, social stability and home manners are part of the training, so your dog fits the household as well as it protects it. Tell us about your family and we will advise honestly.

How to choose a K9 protection dog.

Five questions to settle before you meet any dog.

1 Define the job

Home guardian, family companion, or executive protection? The role decides the dog.

2 Be honest about your lifestyle

Time, space, activity level and handling experience matter more than looks.

3 Consider your household

Children, other pets and frequent visitors call for a steadier temperament.

4 Choose trained dog or puppy

A trained dog is protecting from day one. A puppy lets you bond early but takes time and work.

5 Meet the dog

Talk to us first, then meet the dog and see how it responds to you.

Which breed fits?

German Shepherd: families and first-time owners. Malinois: active, experienced handlers.

Dutch Shepherd: active homes wanting balance. Rottweiler: a strong, steady guardian.

Start with a conversation.

Tell us about your home and what you need. We reply personally, and we only move forward when the match is right. Discreet, no pressure.
